Looking at Sites for Public Building.

Major Fred Brackett, representing the office of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department at Washington, D. C., was here Tuesday and Wednesday going over the various sites offered the government for the new postoffice building and examining into the titles. After viewing the sites that had been heretofore priced to the government, he looked at several others. We understand he was particularly pleased with the property of Mr. Anthony Thornton on Pleasant and Eighth streets. It was near the depot and otherwise answered all requirements. However, he will not file his report until he returns to Washington.

Our Merchants Easy For Strangers.

We want to notify the merchants of Paris that the man, Mr. Gilbert, who so beautifully took them in last week on his fake advertising scheme, "The Commerce of Greater Paris," had no connection whatever with this office. The Bourbon News only printed the job for him and loaned him a few of our cuts. If he made the statement to any of you that he was representing us he simply lied. He did not even give us the job of printing until after he had finished his soliciting. If any of the merchants, however, thought they were favoring us in giving this stranger his ad., we, of course, appreciate their good intention, but Mr. Gilbert was the one who received the benefit from same. We do not believe in such fake schemes, we believe only in the legitimate newspaper advertising.

From Coast to Coast.

At a stormy meeting of the directors of the Illinois Central railroad, in New York, J. T. Harpham was elected president to succeed Stuyvesant Fish. The directors who refused to vote for Mr. Fish charged him with bad faith. It is now believed that E. H. Harriman's scheme of a railroad from coast to coast under one management, will be realized.
